Local Medicine and Local Pharmacy

Several physicians and pharmacists, dabbling in medical history, have devoted their spare time to the past of the town where they were living. From their efforts many contributions providing valuable information have resulted. Needless to say that an endless field of study is still lying unused in the local or provincial archives.

For the sake of convenience of those interested in the medical past of some Dutch towns, it has been thought advisable to insert the data on local pharmacy in a separate section of this chapter.

As in both sections the items are listed alphabetically according to the name of the towns, it will be easy for the reader interested in a special town or district to check if anything has been written on the subject in question.

The entries on botanical gardens that were closely related to the exercise of pharmacy and medicine have already found a place in chapter VI under the heading Botany (botanical gardens). Likewise the entries on local hospitals have been included in chapter XVII. Entries on local epidemics have been included in chapter VII under the heading of the disease (leprosy, plague).
